In July 2020 compared to the previous month, both average paid employment and average gross wages and salaries in enterprise sector increased

In July 2020, restoring pre-pandemic full-time jobs, returning of employees from care benefits, sickness benefits and unpaid leaves, as well as resuming admissions in the units was observed. It translated into growth in average paid employment in enterprise sector by 1.1% compared to the June this year (in June this year compared to May this year an increase of 0.2% was observed). In comparison to the same period last year, in July this year the decline in average paid employment was continued (by 2.3%), but to a lesser extent than in the previous month, when it amounted to 3.3%.

In July this year, compared to June this year, an increase in average gross wages and salaries in enterprise sector was noted. It was caused by, among others by continuation of the payment of bonuses, quarterly, annual and jubilee awards and retirement severance pays (which beside the base remuneration are also included as components of wages and salaries), and in some units, increasing wages and restoring the salary to the level before the pandemic.
