Dwellings owned by housing cooperatives

Definition:

Dwellings in buildings which are the property or joint property of housing cooperatives, excluding dwellings for which, on the grounds of the Act of December 15, 2000 on housing cooperatives, a separate ownership title was established, for the benefit of one or more natural persons.

Housing cooperative - is a voluntary and self-governing association of members, conducting economic activity aiming at satisfying the housing needs of its members and their families, by providing structurally separate dwellings or single - family houses as well as premises designated for other use to the members. Two types of rights can be distinguished: - a cooperative tenant's right to a dwelling, a cooperative ownership right to a dwelling.
